Who We Are

The Women, Peace and Security Network – Canada (WPSN-C) is a network of over 40 Canadian organizations and individuals committed to addressing issues of women, peace and security.

What We Do

The network has two main functions:

1. To promote and monitor the efforts of the Government of Canada to implement and support the United Nation Security Council Resolutions on women, peace and security; and,
2. To provide a forum for exchange and action by Canadian civil society on issues related to women, peace and security.

The WPSN-C also supports the International Campaign to Stop Rape and Gender Violence in Conflict, as well as international efforts to promote gender equality.

WPSN-C Membership

WPSN-C members are able to amplify their voices by working with like-minded organizations and individuals, and coordinating joint actions. The network also provides a platform for information-sharing, capacity-building and exchange.

To help us function as a network, membership is open to Canadian women and men, as well as organizations. Members state their agreement with the network's commitments (above) and identify a contribution to the network (time or in-kind). Members also sign on to advocacy products, such as letters, new releases and events, as they are able.
